

Dr. Thomas Doyle begins fellowship

Thomas D. Doyle, a research chemist who has been working in the area of drug analysis with the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) since 1963, joined the staff July 7 as a fellow in the Gallaudet Institute.

Dr. Doyle, who received a PhD in chemistry from George Washington University in 1971, is the third person to be appointed to the one-year Gallaudet Institute Executive Fellowship Program since it was established in 1984. The program is designed to provide intensive hands-on experience in senior level management positions for hearing impaired professionals.

The fellowship combines an internship in the Office of the President with off-campus, national-level management development seminars. Each internship, while tailored to match the interests and abilities of the fellow, typically develops skills in planning, budgeting and policy- and decision-making.

Dr. Doyle, who became profoundly deaf from meningitis at age 8, has worked since October 1985 in the FDA's Division of Cardio-Renal New Drug Products. Prior to that he served in the Division of Drug Chemistry as a supervisory research chemist and chief of the General Methods Research Branch.

He received numerous awards while at the FDA and also during his academic years. At Fordham University, where he received a bachelor of science degree cum laude in chemistry and philosophy in 1960, Dr. Doyle ranked in the top 1 percent of his class and received first prize in chemistry all four years. At the FDA/Georgetown University Institute of Advanced Analytical Chemistry in 1964 he finished first in a national class of 30 FDA chemists. He completed requirements for his PhD with a grade point average of 4.0.

Becoming a Gallaudet Institute fellow "represents for me a distinct change in career objectives," said Dr. Doyle, "away from exclusively scientific pursuits and toward the broader domains of administration and management. However, the seeds for this change have long been there, lacking only the nourishment which the institute now offers."

Last year there were two Gallaudet Institute fellows, William J. A. Marshall and Judith Tingley. Marshall is an associate professor in the Department of Administration and Supervision at Gallaudet, and Tingley has worked since 1978 as the state coordinator of Services for the Deaf in California.

Intern training program held on campus

Twelve professionals from across the country were on campus from June 30 to July 11 to participate as interns in the annual "Training Program in Continuing/Community Education" sponsored by the College for Continuing Education (CCE).

The intern training program is designed to develop, implement and nurture a nationwide community education network for deaf individuals.

Approximately 25 College professionals presented lectures on topics such as tapping the resources of alumni organizations; understanding, assessing and using demographics; computing, managing, budgeting and enrollment reporting; grants and proposal writing; public relations and promotions; marketing and using community resources; and fundraising. Representatives of numerous campus units described individual programs and available resources.

The interns were Gail Bober, coordinator of the Community Affairs Office, Pennsylvania School for the Deaf in Philadelphia; Mary Clark, director of the Kellogg Project, Alabama Institute for the Deaf and Blind in Dothan; Daniel Emerick Jr., Western Pennsylvania School for the Deaf in Pittsburgh; Cathe Fritz, Charleston (S.C.) County School District;

Judy Goldsmith, Iowa Western Community College in Council Bluffs; Donald Koons, director of Manpower Development/Community Education, Harrisburg (Pa.) Area Community College; Joseph Kopas, sign language coordinator/community liaison, Learning Center for Deaf Children, Framingham, Mass.; Diane Mele, coordinator of services for the deaf community, New England Independent Living Program, Lawrence, Mass.;

Ann M. Phillips, assistant director, Deaf Action Center, Dallas, Tex.; Don Rhoten, director, Gallaudet Regional Center at Flagler College, St. Augustine, Fla.; Despena Varkados, outreach program coordinator, Washington State School for the Deaf in Vancouver; and Donna Weisman, coordinator of continuing education, Indiana School for the Deaf in Indianapolis.

Patricia Tesar honored as 'outstanding citizen'

Patricia Tesar, a 1986 master's degree recipient and a counselor in the Career Center, was recently awarded a Congressional Certificate of Achievement.

The certificate recognizes Tesar as "an outstanding citizen."

In presenting the award, Congresswoman Mary Rose Oakar (D-Ohio) praised Tesar's academic record and aptitude for counseling hearing impaired people.

"The efforts of dedicated and talented individuals like Patricia are essential if our country is to fulfill its commitment to providing equal opportunity to hearing impaired persons," said Rep. Oakar.

Tesar earlier received the Department of Counseling's 1986 Mima Bravo award.

8 majors planned for newest school set to open in '87

Plans for Gallaudet's new School of Management are "proceeding on schedule," said William Varrieur, director of the School of Management Project.

Dr. Varrieur's model for the school has been reviewed by the Central Administration, the Board of Trustees and by the faculty. Based on that input, the model is now being revised for presentation to the faculty curriculum committee (Committee B) in the fall.

Pending faculty approval, President Jerry C. Lee and Provost Catherine Ingold have tentatively set the opening of the School of Management for Jan. 1, 1987, when hiring for new positions is anticipated to begin. An implementation phase will follow during the spring and summer, with the program in full operation by the fall semester of 1987.

The model establishes eight new majors, five of them at Gallaudet and three through the Washington Consortium of Universities and Colleges. The five majors planned to be offered at Gallaudet are business management, entrepreneurial studies, public administration, business economics and a "strengthened" program in business administration.

Majors planned to be available through the consortium are finance, personnel and industrial relations, and a possible third major in insurance or financial planning.

Plans for the School of Management also call for the establishment of an Institute for Management Studies offering seminars, short courses and lectures, and a management resource center housing computer terminals, Fortune 500 financial reports and other related materials.

According to the model, students and faculty in the School of Management

It's time to let loose!

The annual Staff Appreciation Picnic will be this Friday, July 18, from 2 to 5 p.m. on Faculty Row. On the agenda are music provided by a disc jockey and competitive games between individuals and departments, including pie eating, potato relay and egg toss contests. The Collegiate Barbequers will be serving barbequed chicken, spareribs, baked beans, soft drinks and all the trimmings. Sorry, say planners, but no beer this year. However, a good time and finger-licking food await those who attend. Shorts, jeans and T-shirts are the "in" thing to wear. Everyone is invited—see you there!

DRCC name change seen as positive step

The Board of Trustees has expressed pleasure with the Deafness Related Concerns Council's decision to change the name of the group to the President's Council on Deafness (PCD).

In a letter to Barbara Kannapell, chair of PCD and recently appointed fellow in the College of Arts and Sciences, President Jerry C. Lee said that the board's agreement was a very positive move.

The letter also expressed the expectation that, under the board's new subcommittee structure, PCD members will occasionally be asked to share concerns as appropriate.

"I look forward to a continuing constructive relationship with the council," said Dr. Lee.

ment will participate in work/research projects in the public and private sectors.

Dr. Varrieur said that plans are already underway for a management seminar series to be given this fall or next spring on such topics as decision making, stress management and up-to-date management tools.

"We've had outstanding support from industry," said Dr. Varrieur, noting that several large corporations are "very interested" in providing both matching grants for the development of the school and executives for seminar instruction.

You and Your Job

The Personnel Office has recently been inundated with requests to verify employment. In order to ensure prompt processing of employment verifications, please make sure that you sign a release form with the credit-granting institution or in the Personnel Office. If Personnel receives a request by telephone, it will send a form for your signature. The office will not release salary information without your consent. Requests for employment verification should be sent to Trudy Lewis, Personnel, College Hall, room B-14.

To illustrate a Gallaudet Today article on the problems hearing impaired youths experience in the criminal justice system, Officer Jose Coleman applies handcuffs to "model" student Patrick McKeever in this posed picture. Sgt. Mike Jernagin looks on. The newest issue of GT was written by staff of the National Center for Law and the Deaf.
